Learning life skills helps students to create better futures for themselves and for the world at large. With Training young people become responsible individuals and equipped to face the bigger world.

In everyday life, the development of life skills helps students to find new ways of thinking and problem solving. These are just a handful of examples of real ways to teach students real tangible skills that will help them more than most textbooks ever could.

MENTAL HEALTH

It's no secret that building strong minds require introduction of Mental Health concepts from young age. The mental health of students can affect their education, social life, and emotional well-being. Students struggling with their mental health may experience greater challenges throughout school and adulthood, while those not struggling may have a greater zest for their education, social experiences, and more. We believe that Education Institutions need to provide this training as a mandatory for their students.

EMOTIONAL INTELLIGENCE

A student with high EQ can communicate better, lessen their anxiety and stress, resolve conflicts, improve relationships, empathize with others, and overcome life's challenges.

BUILDING RESILIENCE

Resilience will also help them to approach new situations, people or experiences with confidence and a positive mindset

CHANELLING EMOTIONS

Emotions help sound an alarm when something is out of line. They can shine a light on underlying motivations and desires. It inspires introspection, positive action and change.

STRESS MANAGEMENT

Stress can lead to depression and anxiety in students. This can, in turn, negatively impact school and work performance and personal relationships

NEGATIVE THOUGHTS & FEARS

Befriend your Brain, a concept introduced by Padmaja Evuri to guide students on how negative thoughts & fears can be used for one's benefit by channelling them in a healthy way.
